Angel stared out into the open space of the night air at the top of a 50

>story building, writing which was something he almost never did, he read more than anything but tonight, something made him write.

I miss her.

>

>I always will.

>
But this is best, for her anyway and me ... I don't matter. She is the only >thing that matters, that has ever mattered.

>
Sure, my pain is raw and always there but I can deal with it; I have to >deal with it.

>
If I stayed, I'd have gotten her killed, or killed her myself.

>

>I can't not touch her and touching her is like running through fire; deadly.

>
I wonder even after she is dead if I'll survive.

>

>Will I?

>
Will I even survive her death or will I stake myself the minute I feel her >death? Not find out but feel it because we're soulmates; one so I'll know.

>
My heart will be gone, permentaly unlike now, where she has it.
